SANE ENOUGH* named a Foreword Reviews' 2015 INDIEFAB Book of the Year Awards winner

Houston, TX – Today, Crossvine Press is pleased to announce that our first published book, SANE ENOUGH by Houston author Linda Day, has been named a winner in the 18th annual Foreword Reviews' INDIEFAB Book of the Year Awards: <https://indiefab.forewordreviews.com/books/sane-enough/>

Narrowed down from nearly 2,000 entries by a panel of librarians and booksellers, along with Foreword Reviews' editorial staff, the winners in 66 categories are considered the year's best books published by independent publishers, university presses, and self-published authors. Foreword Reviews made the announcement in a live presentation at the American Library Association Annual Conference. A complete list of winners can be found at: <https://indiefab.forewordreviews.com/winners/2015/>

“Foreword’s INDIEFAB judges are the key to our winners selection process, and, in our minds, the most foolproof way to choose award-winning books,” said Victoria Sutherland, publisher of Foreword Reviews. “We work with a librarian and bookseller in each category to provide us with an insider’s perspective on what would do well on consumer and library shelves. Using industry professionals confirms the trade quality of a book.”

“We are extremely pleased that SANE ENOUGH has received this recognition,” said Crossvine Press. “Mother-daughter sexual abuse (MDSA) is a very difficult subject and one that tends to be denied by the general public. Yet it can lead to horrible outcomes for the victim, including sexual confusion, terrifying flashbacks, fatal addictions and ruined lives. Several survivors who have discovered this book have written to the author to say that it ‘saved their life,’ and we believe that is the real icing on the cake. The subject of MDSA needs more discussion, and we hope the success and quality of this book will lead to that.”
